LOOKING TOWARD 2025

As we wind down from a busy summer and head into cozy season, New York Angus is primed to enter 2025 as a leader across state associations. We have momentum and we need to capitalize on it.

In this issue you will find our feature story written by western New York native, Allison McNamara, a junior at Oklahoma State University dual majoring in Agricultural Communications and Animal Science.

Allison reached out to me in September looking to write her profile feature story for one of her classes on the New York Angus Association. Allison noted that with our recent rebrand and new website, the New York Angus Association was an easy choice for her profile feature.

I am thrilled that our efforts are being noticed, and that we are seeing the value of our investment in the future of New York Angus.

Since its launch on August 1st, newyorkangus.org has seen 219 visitors who have viewed the site 719 times - 109 of those views coming on the very first day! The New York Angus Journal ranks second among page views right behind the home page.

As we continue to build on this essential tool, we rely on New York Angus Association members to submit ads and content for the website and the New York Angus Journal. We are at the forefront of change - let's CAPITALIZE on it!

Gabby Glenister
Editor, New York Angus Journal

PRESIDENT'S MESSAGE

I would like to start by wishing all breeders a safe and happy calving season. What an impressive ROV Angus Show at the New York State Fair! We had 77 head of Angus across the shavings this year! There are only a few State Fairs that have ROV Angus Shows - New York is one of them. What an accomplishment for New York.

Unfortunately, the NY State Online Sale had to be cancelled due to lack of consignments. This brings me back to the point I've made in the past of unity and working together in the New York Angus Association. The goal as an association is to improve every year. I'm looking forward to the New York State Sale in 2025. With the sale being in a different format and setting, it will be exciting.

If I can answer any questions about anything with the New York Angus Association or if any member has any new ideas, please feel free to reach out to me.

Happy Holidays,

Chad Hazelkamp

1. TELL US A LITTLE ABOUT YOURSELVES. HOW DID YOU GET STARTED IN THE CATTLE INDUSTRY?
Angus cattle have always been a big part of our lives. We both started showing cattle at a young age. I purchased show heifers from Mike and Connie Kelley, becoming good family friends. Matt also showed cattle as a junior, learning from his grandpa Mike, and his father Scott. We were both active as junior members, sharing the same ideas and views on the cattle industry. We got married in 2022, with a dream to carry on the ideas of Mike and Connie of Kelley's Stock Farm. Today we (Scott, Matthew, and Elizabeth) manage the cattle at Hawk's Hill Farm.

WHAT IS THE HAWK'S HILL ORIGIN STORY?
Our cattle at Hawk's Hill Farm originate from Kelley's Stock Farm. Mike and Connie raised Hereford cattle and transitioned to raising registered Angus cattle with heavy influence from the Connealy program in Nebraska. Scott grew up on the farm, graduated from Cornell University, moved to Cobleskill, and founded Hawk's Hill with his wife Kathy, where our family raises registered Angus cattle and registered Alpine dairy goats. All cattle on the farm today still relate back to the foundation cattle from Kelley's Stock Farm.

NEW BRANDING

RAISING THE BAR: HOW THE NEW YORK ANGUS ASSOCIATION SUPPORTS LOCAL PRODUCERS

PROMOTING NEW YORK ANGUS
CATTLE + ANGUS BREEDERS

BECOME A MEMBER

STORY BY ALLISON MCNAMARA

AT ITS CORE,

the New York Angus Association was established with Angus cattle producers in mind. The NYAA aims to promote New York Angus breeders, members and affiliates while also participating in national programs run by the American Angus Association, according to the NYAA.

With a membership that spans the state – from small family farms to larger commercial operations – the association wants to benefit Angus producers with all types of operations, according to the NYAA.

"Having registered cattle, I want to support our local association because, ultimately, they're designed to benefit the members," said Erica Siler, NYAA member and owner of Yankee Beef. "AFTER WE STARTED RAISING ANGUS CATTLE, JOINING THE ASSOCIATION WAS AN OBVIOUS CHOICE."

The NYAA is evolving to meet the diverse needs of its members through a rebranding initiative that reflects a commitment to growth and improvement, Siler said.

"As a National Junior Angus Association member, I always had a passion for leadership and wanting to make things better," said Gabby Glenister, NYAA secretary. "After I began working with the association in December 2021, the rebranding and refreshed website were always in the back of my mind." Glenister first presented the idea and concept of rebranding to the board last fall, starting with the magazine, the New York Angus Journal, which published its inaugural issue in spring 2024, she said.

The association recognized its old website was outdated and not user-friendly, prompting the need for an upgrade to enhance member engagement, Glenister said. Following the magazine's launch, Glenister introduced a new logo and a refreshed website to complement the rebrand, she said.

"Now that we have the foundation laid down, the next step in the website design is adding an e-commerce option for members to pay their membership and advertising fees online with a credit card," she said.

Recognizing few producers have the resources to create their own websites, the NYAA also plans to incorporate a page on the NYAA site where breeders can showcase their cattle operations without the need for an individual website, Glenister said.

We have an excellent president in Chad Hazekamp, who's been a big catalyst for the rebrand, Glenister said. "He's been incorporating new sales and events and has been friendly and inviting to members, new and old."

While the Angus community in New York may be small, the producers remain resilient and supportive, Siler said. Currently, the community is in a unique position, with many members aging out and a new generation stepping in, Siler said. While change can be intimidating, the younger members are genuinely invested and that's exactly what we need, Siler said.

"IT'S IMPORTANT TO HAVE A GOOD MIX OF PRODUCERS ON THE BOARD OF DIRECTORS BECAUSE THEY'RE THE ONES DRIVING THE WAY THE ASSOCIATION IS GOING," SAID NICOLE TOMMELL, NYAA MEMBER AND OWNER OF MMT CATTLE INCORPORATED. "IF YOU DON'T HAVE A GOOD MIX OF PEOPLE AT THE STATE LEVEL, THE ASSOCIATION WILL START TO DRIVE ITSELF IN A DIRECTION THAT MIGHT NOT BE THE BEST FOR THE WHOLE."

Despite the progress, the Angus community in New York is not without its struggles, Tommell added. Producers trying to market cattle in New York face several challenges because of the lingering stigma associated with the region and physical location, Tommell said.

"I remember when I was in college I went to Des Moines for a meeting, and people said to me, 'Oh, you're from New York? There's agriculture in New York?'" Tommell said. "This perception has been around for 100 years, and many people outside New York and New England believe the quality of cattle here is poor."

As a result, New York producers often don't receive the recognition they deserve, Tommell said.

"I doubt people are looking to New York for show heifers for national shows," Tommell said. "It's not where you'd go to find your next champion."

The association organizes biannual sales in November and May to assist members in marketing their cattle amid strong competition, said Matt Kelley, NYAA director and owner of Hawks Hill Farm.

"Marketing cattle west of the Mississippi is always tough," Kelley said. "We aim to help our members with smaller operations market their cattle by putting together a sale of consignments from various farms."

The NYAA is always trying to benefit its members by putting together new initiatives for producers to take advantage of, Kelley said.

The NYAA is launching a new bull and heifer development program in partnership with Erwindale Farms in Waterloo, New York, as an opportunity for NYAA members to have their cattle sent to a custom feeding operation, wrote Chad Hazekamp, NYAA president, in a letter to association members.

"Many of us do not have the proper room or facilities to properly develop our bull or heifer calves," Hazekamp wrote. "It's hard to keep everyone separated, and maybe it's difficult to feed different diets to mature cows, first-calf heifers, developing bulls and developing heifers."

This initiative addresses the challenges members face in properly developing their calves, Hazekamp wrote. Erwindale Farms will optimize growth for breeding bulls and replacement heifers with evaluations, including ultrasound data and breeding soundness exams for bulls, he added.

"I don't have anything to send this year," Siler said. "But, I think it'll be interesting to see how the genetics of the New York Angus community stack up against each other."

Amid the struggles New York cattle producers face, the region also offers distinct advantages that can outweigh these challenges, Siler said.

"We in this region grow high-quality feed for incredibly cheap, and we are not forced to graze cattle on hundreds of acres of subpar or average-quality forage," Siler said. "That's a huge deal when you can grow your own feeds."

Additionally, the proximity to a large urban market gives beef producers access to a broad customer base to sell their products to, Siler added.

The tight-knit community of Angus breeders remains supportive of each other through each failure and success, Tommell said.

"Overall, there is a camaraderie in the Angus community, and we have a good group of leaders pushing forward as a breed association in New York," Tommell said. "As a whole, it's pretty strong and we have good support."

AS THE NYAA NAVIGATES THIS PERIOD OF GROWTH AND TRANSFORMATION, THE COMMITMENT TO SUPPORTING ITS MEMBERS REMAINS AT THE FOREFRONT OF ITS MISSION, GLENISTER SAID. With a renewed focus on innovation and community engagement, the association is set to redefine the perception of New York's Angus cattle, reinforcing the resilience and unity of its breeders for years to come, Siler said. 🐾

3. AS A YOUNG, SUCCESSFUL COUPLE IN THE INDUSTRY, WHAT WAS/IS THE TRANSITION LIKE AS THE NEXT GENERATION?

The beef industry as whole seems to be moving and improving faster than ever. Having an online presence seems to be an aspect an operation must have. Keeping up with social media has had a positive impact for us, reaching new customers we wouldn't have before.

4. WHAT ARE YOU MOST EXCITED ABOUT FOR THE FUTURE OF HAWK'S HILL? WHAT IS YOUR BREEDING PHILOSOPHY? WHAT MARKETING STRATEGIES ARE IMPLEMENTED?

We strive to create productive efficient cattle, without sacrificing phenotype. It's what Mike taught us. Cattle that are docile, with balance, enough red meat, but also possessing a presence, that makes you just love raising them. We have narrowed our focus in the last few years, looking to create easy doing females with that "look", and bulls that will give you just that, with predictability. We are excited for the future of our operation as we focus on keeping these cornerstone traits grandpa taught us, while incorporating new genetics to propel us forward.

5. WHAT ADVICE WOULD YOU GIVE TO THE NEXT GENERATION OF ANGUS PRODUCERS?

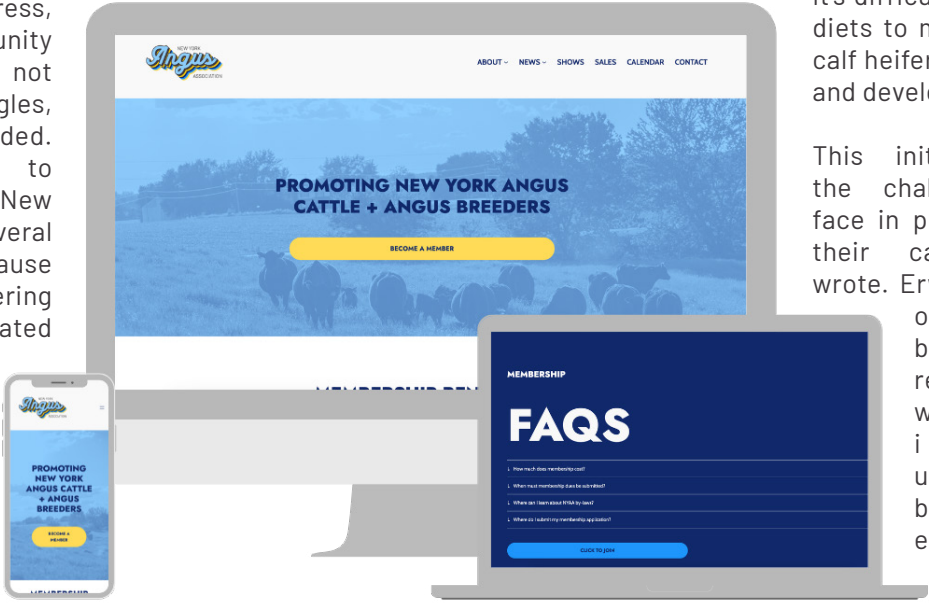

Take advantage of opportunities when they present themselves. Going to sales, shows, or simply visiting other farms and ranches just to talk cattle can always be your next step to a great connection. Whether it's across the country, or just to the next county over, hearing opinions and experiences of other producers can create a huge learning opportunity. We are lucky to be part of an industry that is incredibly welcoming, which isn't always the case in today's world. Get out there and find your people, there's no better time than the present.

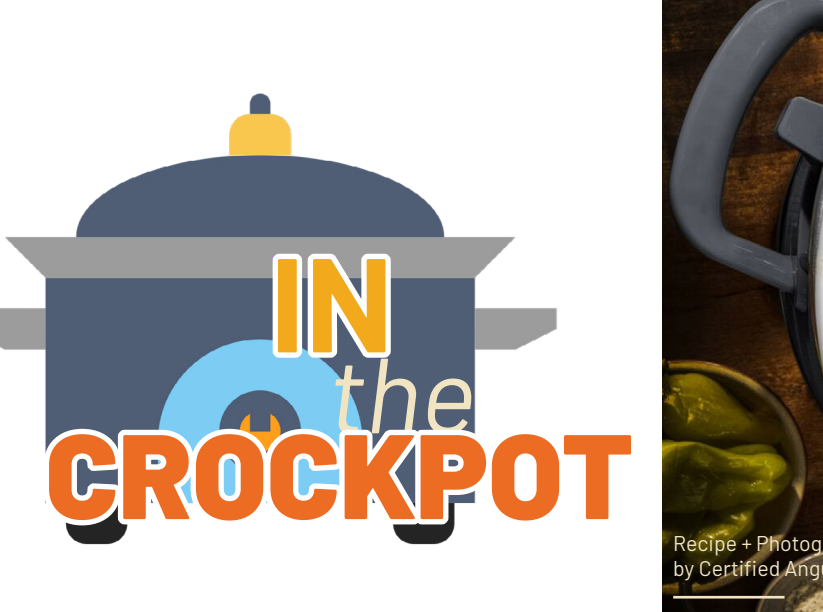

6. WHAT VALUE DO YOU GET OUT OF STATE AND NATIONAL ANGUS ASSOCIATION PROGRAMS? WHAT WOULD YOU LIKE TO SEE MORE OF OR IMPROVED?

Our state association along with the American Angus Association make it incredibly easy to make connections. From meetings, shows, sales, and more, we always find it so easy to get in touch when we need to, and help when needed. We have made countless connections, and even close friends, and we wouldn't have these without our state and national associations.

7. WHAT DO YOU WANT YOUR LEGACY TO BE?

We want our operation to be a place known for proven, productive cattle. We raise show cattle, but they also need to be able to go out and do their job once they leave the showring. We like working with families that share the same philosophy. 🐾
